

MAKERERE

UNIVERSITY

SCHOOL OF COMPUTING AND INFORMATICS
TECHNOLOGY

MUHWEZI JERALD 14/U/25199 214024819

April 7, 2017

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY
REPORT

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Background	1
1.2	Objectives	1
1.2.1	Specifically, this study aims to:	1
1.3	Methods	2
1.4	Results	2
1.5	Conclusion	2

1 Introduction

The purpose of this paper is to present and interpret the perception of students cheating. It is important to know the perception of students on cheating because most of the students cheat. This serves as an evaluation of their deed. The first thing to recognize about cheating is that vast majority of students believe that cheating is bad, yet there are still many who practice it. Cheating in school is called academic dishonesty.

1.1 Background

There are varying taxonomies of academic dishonesty [Pavela, 1978]. There are three official Swedish main categories: - Cheating that is to say. using cribs notes and unauthorized materials - Unauthorized collaboration that is to say. working together on out-of-class individual assignments - Plagiarism and fabrication that is to say. using parts, or the whole, of a text written by another person without acknowledgment; submitting the same paper or parts of it, for credit in more than one course, falsification of information.

1.2 Objectives

This study was conducted to determine the perception of students examination cheating.

1.2.1 Specifically, this study aims to:

1. Define what is cheating to them
2. Pinpoint the reason why cheating is done
3. Identify whether cheating is a product of laziness or some other circumstances and

4. Determine the ways on how they cheat.

1.3 Methods

The questionnaire used to collect data was constructed on basis of a previous study by [Hult, 2003] and covered 23 situations or scenarios. Some new items were added inspired by other studies. The students were asked to state their attitudes towards cheating and plagiarism. We did not ask for information about their behavior, which would require other methods. The researchers distributed the questionnaire at the end of 14 lessons to students in four different programs.

1.4 Results

The phenomenon of cheating is linguistically defined as a breach of a moral norm.

Plagiarism is also a concept that makes one think of breaching moral norms, although not that serious and since it is not that well defined, one might not be aware of the breach. There are researchers who suggest that plagiarism is not cheating at all as it is not always a deliberate behavior. In this case, we refer to deliberate plagiarism.

1.5 Conclusion

For educational purposes the results of this study can contribute to the understanding of the complexity of students attitudes towards different ways of cheating and plagiarism.

It might be a good idea to ask students to participate in reference groups in order to find successful ways of preventing at least some of the different kinds of academic dishonesty that exist.

References

- [Hult, 2003] Hult, A. H. . (2003). Attfuskaochplagiera ettstätt leva ellerettstättverleva? (to cheat and plagiarize a way of living or surviving?) linkping university: Cul-rapporter. nr 6.
- [Pavela, 1978] Pavela, G. (1978). Judicial review of academic decision-making after horowitz. School Law Journal, 55:55–75.